ABOUT BUYING RUGS.

In buying Turkish rugs one drawback is the amount of time wasted, but to the Turk time is utterly of no value. He would just as soon spend a day in dickering over one rug as not, and if noon-time should come while the trade is going on, he will stop abruptly, pull down his prayer rug, kneel upon it, bow his head to the dust and say his prayers, entirely indifferent to his customer's convenience. He will frequently refuse to trade or talk business, answering all protests with "To-morrow." We know the value of time as well as of rugs, so you need fear the loss of neither in looking over the unapproachable stock of

AFTERNOON SPENT IN TALK

Democrats Have Diverse Views as to the Time for Their State Convention.

Candidates Want Their Fate Settled Early, but Managers Favor Delay—Date Fixed in August—Republican County Convention.

When the Democratic State central committee came together yesterday afternoon, in its pleasant quarters in Union Block, on West Maryland street, there were many candidates as committeemen present. Of the latter, but one remained away, and it is possible, if the candidates had been called off, the list would have numbered one or two more than the committee. Two aspirants for office did not go near headquarters during the sitting of the committee. They were Thos. B. Byrnes, of Evansville, and Albert Gall, candidates for State Treasurer. Over in the committee's reception-room were their opponent, Berghoff, of Fort Wayne, and with the committeemen themselves their other opponent, P. H. McCormack, of Columbus. McCormack possessed this advantage by right of membership, and could afford to chuckle over it, as the committee had ordered all candidates not of its body out of its private room. The disgraced rejected the order gracefully, and it was after it was put in force that Messrs. Byrnes and Gall got together in the Grand Hotel to exchange confidences. Mr. Byrnes did not remain long, for he got his grip and started off to take a train for Indianapolis when he met ex-chairman and, presumably, ex-manager of his party, James L. Rice. Mr. Rice had just returned from Terre Haute, and asked Byrnes what brought him to Indianapolis. The Evansville gentleman mentioned casually in his reply, the meeting of the committee.

What is the committee meeting here to-day? inquired Rice.
"Certainly, didn't you know it?" said Byrnes.
"I have so much to attend to now, that it is hard for me to keep track of political occurrences," remarked Rice.
"Well, if you have a little concern about politics, go with me to Muncie," was the invitation of Byrnes.

"Can't do it this afternoon. I have business here, but I will meet you in Muncie to-morrow. But why are you away from the committee?" he asked.
"They will not let candidates in except those members of the committee and there is no use of my staying here."

It did not occur to them, perhaps, that it did to me when I was a candidate for Auditor of State, sharply said Rice, and so the conversation of the Byrnes and McCormack and Rice remaining here to keep the Democrats from getting away from him altogether.

It was about as uninteresting a meeting, yesterday, as the Democrats have held for a long time. It was called for general purposes, but the candidates, nearly all in the field, were not present. The Superintendent of Public Instruction and Treasurer of State, have been, for a long time, restless concerning the coming of the State convention. The committee did not propose to fix it yesterday, but when the meeting was called to order the first thing broached was the State convention. A discussion followed that occupied most of the afternoon and which little time was left for other business. Ex-Senator McDonald was taken into the committee confidence, but for some cause not stated ex-Governor Gray was not present.

About the time he should have been there, if he had any preference as to the date for the convention, he was in the federal court-room. He went there to see how his trial for violating the pension laws. But it is said the ex-Governor had his own with the members of the committee in the morning. He favored an early convention, as did most of the candidates, among whom were Joseph T. Fanning and Elmer E. Griffith, for Supreme Court Clerk; Elmer E. Griffith, for Frankfort, and A. D. Voria, of Franklin, for Superintendent of Public Instruction. The candidates for other offices were not present.

In the meeting two factions presented plausible arguments both for an early and a late date, while a third was equally persistent in the belief that the best policy would be to postpone definite action. But a majority of the candidates insisted that an early convention would be better in all respects for the party. A lively discussion took place, during which some harsh language was used, those favoring the candidates' view showing a tendency to criticize the other committeemen for their opposition to the wishes of the majority.

Several motions fixing the time of the latter part of this month and about the middle of July were either voted down directly or failed and finally August 23 was selected as the date. A motion to this effect was carried with only three dissenting votes.

Another question that gave rise to much talk was the choice of a holding place for the convention. The Allen county central committee sent down a delegation with a request that the convention be held in Fort Wayne, and their following was by no means weak. Their cause was championed by George W. Long, of Fort Wayne, who claimed that his town was very anxious to secure the convention, Indianapolis, he said, had no room, and had no full share of State conventions. It was also claimed that Fort Wayne had ample facilities to accommodate a large crowd. But the committeemen evidently thought otherwise. On the first ballot two of them refused to vote and the result was declared unsatisfactory. A second ballot resulted in a tie—six to six. On the third ballot, votes were cast for Indianapolis and five for Fort Wayne, and the work of the committee was at an end.

There was a good deal of dissatisfaction among Democrats in the lobby of the Grand last night. The fact that the candidates had been almost unanimously in favor of an early convention prompted many to criticize the committee's action very sharply. The latter's advocates held out, however, that the committee had acted for the best interests of the Democratic party, and not of the few.

Republican County Convention.

The Republican county executive committee met last night and decided to call the convention to nominate a county and legislative ticket for July 19 at Tomlinson Hall. The basis of apportionment of delegates is soon to be arranged by the committee.

THE COUNTY ASYLUM.

Grand Jury Inspection and What Was Found at the Institution—The Insane Patients.

So much having been said in the past week concerning the condition of the county asylum a Journal reporter made a visit to the place yesterday on a tour of inspection. Superintendent Smith Williams was found with a party of men at the door, who proved to be the grand jurors, making their monthly visit to the institution. Of course, everything was in spick-span order, but it is fair to say that the appearance of things indicated a constant state of cleanliness. The reporter was given full privilege to visit every part of the building, and Dr. Otto Williams, son of the superintendent, was requested to act as his escort. It has been said that the insane ward of the asylum is malarious, unhealthy and unsafe in case of fire. It was certainly not malarious yesterday. The floors had been thoroughly scrubbed, the windows were open, and the summer breezes were blowing in from the fields. The male inmates, twenty-three in number, had just come in from their daily constitutional in the woods. It was their day to bathe, according to the rules of the institution, so the men were cleanly in appearance.

It is true, the inmates are kept in the attic, for there is at present, Superintendent Williams says, no other quarters for them. The ten spare rooms that have been referred to as available for the insane are, he says, really eight small apartments partitioned off on the floor space of the large room used as the chapel. Two of these are occupied by attendants, and the rest are required. It is said, for the storage of linen and the underwear used in the institution. The attic floor is divided into apartments by partitions which do not reach to the roof. Some of the rooms have windows, and some do not. In case of fire, however, there would not be an awful loss of life. An attendant, who is constantly present, and with the facilities at hand all possible precaution seems to be taken. Marion county, Dr. Otto Williams says, has more than half as many insane as the Central Hospital for the Insane, but when the Richmond and Evansville hospitals are completed the crowded condition of the central institution will be greatly relieved.

The room from which the idiot, Lefever, jumped is on the top floor of the west wing. The window which he somehow managed to raise, and through which he fell, is constantly on the rollers. It has no lock, but was kept closed at night. Lefever's idiosyncrasy was of the most revolting form at times. He was always in an out of the large wooden cage which served him for a bed. The lid of the cage is so heavy that it is thought unnecessary to bolt it on an open space. The number of paupers in that institution now is about 245, but in the winter it runs up to 275. Bunks are then required in the halls to accommodate the inmates.

THE SCHOOL ELECTION.

The Candidates, District Boundaries and Places Therein Where Voting Is to Be Done.

One week from to-morrow, that is, the second Saturday in June, the election of school commissioners for four of the eleven districts of this city will be held. Thus far no opposing candidate has appeared against Dr. J. J. Garven in the Third, John Galvin in the Fifth and J. W. Loeper in the Sixth, each of whom, as well as Clemens Vonnegut, in the Ninth, is running for re-election. Mr. Vonnegut's opponent is Dr. Alenbert W. Brayton. For a time there was talk of opposition to Mr. Galvin, but it now appears that he has a clear field. The boundaries of the districts in which the election is to occur are as follows:

Third District—Beginning at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Washington streets; thence north by the center of Pennsylvania street to Fernwood street; thence north by the center of Meridian to Walnut; thence west by the center of Walnut to Lafayette railroad track; thence south by the center of the track to Ohio; thence east by the center of Ohio to Tennessee; thence south by the center of Tennessee to Washington; thence east by the center of Washington to Pennsylvania; thence north to the place of beginning. Voting place—Third district school building, on Meridian, between Ohio and New York streets.

Fifth District—Beginning at the intersection of White river and Washington street; thence east by the center of Washington street to Virginia avenue; thence southeast by the center of Virginia avenue to Delaware street; thence south by the center of Delaware street to the Union railway tracks; thence southwest on the line of the Union railway tracks to Louisiana street; thence west by the center of Louisiana street to Tennessee street; thence south by the center of Tennessee street and the canal to the center of the canal; thence west on the south corporation line to White river; thence northwardly, following the course of White river, to the place of beginning, and north district school building in the city limits. Voting place—Fifth district school building, on Maryland street, between Mississippi and Missouri streets.

Sixth District—Beginning at a point where the Union railway tracks cross Alabama street; thence south by the center of Alabama street to McCarty street; thence east by the center of McCarty street to High street; thence south by the center of High street to Coburn street; thence east by the center of Coburn street to the alley running south; thence south by the center of the alley to the west line of Vanden's addition, and between Wallace street and Franklin street, to Yeiser street; thence east by the center of Yeiser street to Franklin street; thence south by the center of Franklin street to a continuous line to the south corporation line; thence west on the south corporation line to the canal; thence north on the line of the canal to Tennessee street; thence east by the center of Tennessee street to the Union railway tracks; thence east by the Union railway tracks to Alabama street, the place of beginning. Voting place—Sixth district school building, corner of Union and Phillips streets.

Ninth District—Beginning at the intersection of Chatham and St. Clair streets; thence south by the center of Chatham and Liberty streets to the Union railway tracks; thence south by the center of the tracks to Washington street; thence north on the line of said railway tracks to Washington street; thence east by the center of Washington street and the National road to the east corporation line; thence north on said corporation line to Pogue's Creek gravel road; thence west to the western boundary of the arsenal; thence south on the western boundary of the arsenal grounds to a point due east of and opposite to St. Clair street; thence west from that point to the center of the street; thence east by the center of St. Clair street to the place of beginning. Voting place—Ninth district school building, corner Vermont and Davidson streets.

Articles of Incorporation.

The following articles of incorporation were filed with the Secretary of State yesterday: The New Jersey-Street Building and Loan Association of Indianapolis, capital stock $600,000, of which $15,000 has been subscribed; directors, Wm. H. Leedy, Chas. W. Greene and others. The Commercial Club Street and Road Association of New York, capital stock $100,000, of which $10,000 has been subscribed; directors, John Baer, C. C. Brown and others. Zionville Lodge, No. 261, K. of E., of Zionville; James N. Harmon, Albert Gregory and Samuel E. Essex, trustees.

Teacher's Training Class.

The graduates of the Sunday-school training class, uniting with the old junior class, have determined to continue their practice work during the summer, and will therefore hold a session this evening in the lecture-room of the First Presbyterian Church, commencing at 7:45 o'clock. This practice work covers a series of model exercises on the regular Sunday-school lesson, and constitutes an excellent preparation for the work of the class on the succeeding Sabbath. The class extends a cordial invitation to all Sunday-school workers to attend these exercises. No fee will be charged.

The County Commissioners.

The County Commissioners yesterday appointed John Johnson, James L. Thompson and A. B. Harlan road-viewers to investigate the petition of Indian Lewis and others for a road near Brightwood. The board will attend to applications for liquor licenses the balance of the week. A remonstrance with ninety signatures came in from Brightwood yesterday asking that no more licenses be granted for the town, and, furthermore, that no reduction be made in the license fee. The latter question is not within the jurisdiction of the board.

The Park Theater.

"The Main Line" has pleased large audiences at the Park Theater during the week. The performance embraces several popular features. Next week William C. Cowper, actor and dramatist, will present his new play, "A Mexican Romance," at this house. Mr. Cowper will appear with W. R. Hatch, Miss Lenore Gordon and others. The piece was produced in Chicago last week.

"It Was Ever Thus."

My mother's house on West Washington street burned last Saturday evening. It was insured with Robert Zener & Co., and notified Mr. Zener of the loss. To-day Mr. Zener telephoned me to have my mother come to their office, No. 29 1/2 North Pennsylvania street, and get her money. I did not think they had paid the loss, but on the full amount of the policy. No discount, no delay, no quibbling. CHAS. G. TRAUB, JUNE 3, 1890.

INFLUENCE OF THE SPIRITS

A Medium Entertains Believers and Others with What She Calls Fire Tests.

The Skeptical Reporter Details What He Saw and Heard at a Seance Where a Great Feat Was Promised.

It was a silver collection at the door and the reporter, putting down a ten-cent piece walked in and took a front seat. This was at Mansur Hall last evening where Miss Emma Nickerson, of Boston, a noted spiritualist, was to give "The Fire Test." There was a preponderance of fat ladies in the audience, as there always is at spiritualistic entertainments. This is mentioned merely as a fact; the reporter has no theory upon the subject. There was some information passed among the believers that there were four or five skeptics present and an old lady who carried her nose quite high in the air sniffed very decidedly and remarked, with pointed emphasis, "Much good may it do 'em." A couple of men near the reporter indulged in an interchange of experiences regarding various remarkable things they had seen. "I knowed a man," said one, "who set tacks and glass like a boss would eat hay."

"Do you think it was natural?" inquired the other.
"Yes, sir; perfectly natural. He would take three or four carpets tacks and nail wire nails, and a small tin of tacks and glass out of a tumbler."

"He couldn't hardly be a human," said the listener, dubiously.
"He's dead now, but he was called the Human Ostrich, and he filed the bill."

Here another person came in with a whispered statement that he had a friend who "swallowed a sword twenty-two inches long, and made good on it." The speaker then led up to the fire test. The appetite of the audience was to be whetted by delay. Miss Nickerson is a buxom, rather good-looking lady about thirty-five years of age, with black and an excellent pair of dark eyes. She was garbed in a plain gray dress, and was easy and graceful as she stood before the audience and gave them a lecture on "Psychic culture," which preceded the fire test.

"In psychic research," said she, "we find many phases. We find spirit-reading, telepathy, clairvoyance, hypnotism, mediumship, and a host of other things. I myself have passed through many phases of development from simple table rappings and tipplings to clairvoyance, clair-audience, magnetic power, dead trances—a trance at one time lasting three days, when I was released from my body, released and saw friends and surroundings upon the earth side, and wandered through beautiful countries and saw wonderful scenery upon the spirit side. I met and conversed with friends there as readily and easily as I can converse with friends here. A message I received from my old-time friend, Colonel R. J. Thompson, has been a great Shakespearean student, with whom I studied for two years. He was a spiritualist before he passed to spirit land, and he would return and tell me of his experiences. I do not fear the Waterloos for you now, for I see dimly flower-wreathed triumphs you will obtain amid the conflicts of the world. You know and understand this motto—go forth, brave heart, thou art not alone above the blue of heaven's dome, angels praise and gladly praise thee. Go teach the world the way to life."

Miss Nickerson gave this as the Colonel's communication to her, and the reporter, afraid of incoherence, sets it out in this fashion so that these important utterances may not get mixed.

After some further lecture a bowl of water was brought, and preparations for the fire test began. The lady bathed her hands carefully and dried them upon a towel. Then she rubbed them together for some time, slapping them sharply. A tin oil lamp was brought and the chimney removed. She passed her hands through the flame first very quickly, then more slowly, but keeping them constantly moving. A flame of natural gas was turned on from a Welsbach burner, the chimney being taken away. The lady rolled her hands through this for a brief time, and then came from the fire and extended them to the reporter for inspection. They were very plump, and rather pretty hands, and though right from the fire were not scorched in the least. There was a smut from the coal-oil, but that was all. "She didn't linger long about the natural gas, did she?" remarked a man to the reporter. "They haven't had a chance to get acquainted with that kind of fuel in Boston." A skeptical lady ventured the whispered opinion that she had more fire on her hands every time she made griddle cakes than that woman had, and then addressed the audience, "I would like to make a statement," said this person. "It might be thought by some that there was something in the water. I procured the bowl myself, went down to the hydrant and brought the water here and set it on the table. If anybody wants to examine the water, they can do so after the audience is dismissed."

The man who had been on terms of personal intimacy with the human ostrich was convinced that it was all square, but the friend of the sword-swallower was disposed to think the water was hocus in some way, and they continued to argue the matter as the audience filed out.
